Research Project Update

It has been a very busy time lately as our Year 12 SACE students completed their Research Projects. This new subject has given students the opportunity to do extensive research in an area that has meaning and interest for their own lives. It has been fascinating to see such a diverse array of projects—from social and medical research, to design and technology, to art and music ... and everything in between.

There have been some challenging points along the road as teachers and students have felt their way through a new curriculum and a new style of learning altogether. The Pembroke students have certainly risen to the challenge and have shown just how innovative and dynamic they can be in their research. They have set a wonderful example for next year’s Year Twelve students—it will be exciting to see what they accomplish in the second year.
